Supporting Scientific Rationale

Use of amniotic fluid (af) in treating ocular disease and injury.

Effect of amniotic fluid in corneal sensitivity and nerve regeneration after excimer laser ablation.

Effects of topical human amniotic fluid and human serum in a mouse model of keratoconjunctivitis sicca.

Topical amniotic fluid: a potential new alternative for ocular surface diseases.

Sutureless Amniotic Membranes: When and How to Use Them.
Colatrella, N., & Varanelli, J. (2013, October 13).

Amniotic Membrane for Acute Stevens-Johnson Syndrome.
Amniotic membrane use in ophthalmology.
Current Opinion in Ophthalmology, 16(4), 233-40. doi:10.1097/01.i cu.0000172827.31985.3a

Amniotic Membrane Transplantation for Corneal Indications.

Synthetic Epikeratoplasty In Rhesus-Monkeys With Human Type-IV Collagen. Cornea, 12(1), 35-45.